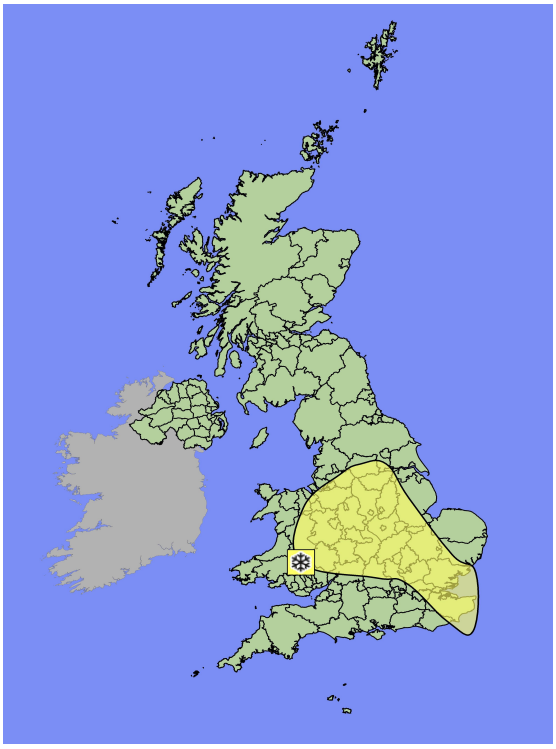
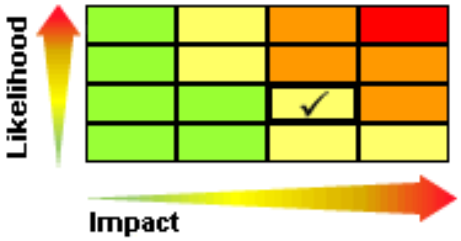
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A front moving into Britain on Saturday will stall during Sunday. As a low pressure centre forms along the front, cold air is expected to be drawn into the frontal zone causing the rain to turn increasingly to snow across in many regions.

There is more than average uncertainty even at this late stage concerning the timing and extent of this snow, and it is possible that this alert will be upgraded to amber.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Snow

Valid from 06:00 on Sun, 10th Feb 2013 until 23:59 on Sun, 10th Feb 2013

Early rain over western Britain is expected to turn to snow as it spreads eastwards during Sunday. Snow cover is likely to be very variable, with some places seeing little settling, others 2-4 cm, and with the potential for 10 cm or more over parts of the Midlands, Kent an Essex, especially later in the day. The public should be aware of the risk of disruption, particularly to travel.
